

Hanover County Spirit of Volunteerism Celebration

Hanover Master Gardeners' Home Gardening Series with Ed Wall as the coordinator was recognized as one of the volunteer organization contributing to the successful environment in Hanover County. Community organizations, businesses, families, youth and adult individuals were recognized on May 15th, 2018.

Material from the program brochure.

Hanover Master Gardeners Home Garden Series Volunteers
Led by Virginia Cooperative Extension's Master Gardeners and coordinated by Volunteer Ed Wall, the Home Garden Series is a 14 week speaker series providing education about various aspects of gardening. The series was requested by community members and is conducted free of charge for anyone who wants the information. In 2017, 14 different topics were presented to approximately 160 participants. The passionate Home Garden volunteers prepare topics, set-up and lead classes, and facilitate activities. Class participants are consistently grateful for the Home Garden Series and report increased confidence in their gardening and their ability to experiment. Not only that, but the series promotes responsible environmental practices and encourages community members to spread their knowledge with family, neighbors, and friends. The ripple effect of this volunteer team will continue to provide positive impacts within the environment and its educated stewards.

Some of the people who contributed to the success of the Home Gardening Series.

