

Potting Party at Pat's

Saturday, November 4, 2017

Our day starts out in Pat's backyard with piles of potting soil, stacks of pots, donated plants and a group of volunteers who don't mind getting their hands dirty.

We start out with our own special mix of potting soil. Pat has been storing it in her yard along with all the pots donated by Sandy McDougal. We move materials around by the wheelbarrow full. One team fills the pots and passes them on to the planting crew.

It's like a production line.

Janet keeps track of what we have and makes tags to go into the pots.

Only master gardeners can get excited enough about roots to insist we take a picture. Wayne had washed the roots. You will also note that not everyone lets gloves come between their hands and that lovely potting soil.

Do you think we might have enough yellow cannas to sell?

It was a cool day and Pat treated us to a spot of warmth from her patio fireplace.

All the people on the left are busy filling their plates for our pot luck lunch.

The food as always was wonderful. The real hit seemed to be the Fresh Apple Cake that Wayne's wife made. Check in our recepie section. It should be posted soon.

Empty plate and comfy chair. Looks like Pat could be ready to take a nap.
